New measurements show that the microwave radiation from base stations for 4G and 5G is increasing and is dangerously high at IKEA in Linköping and at Sergels Torg, among other places. Approximately 1,000,000 microW / m² have been measured at these sites in recent days. The new normal is that the radiation is acutely dangerous for many people. There is no research at all that shows that these levels do not pose health risks to humans with long-term full-body exposure.

These levels are extremely above the levels that previous research has shown increase the risk of ill health with long-term exposure. They are also far above the levels at which ill health has been occurring according to extensive experience for 20 years. These levels are so high that healthy fit men get immediate symptoms in the form of pressure over the chest, headaches, fatigue and more.

Current reference values for permitted radiation in Sweden are seriously incorrect and insufficient as protection against proven health risks. They only protect against immediate effects due to heating, ie when the radiation is so intense that you heat up to a degree and they do not even protect birds and insects against these so-called heating effects. The reference value is based on an outdated view established in the 1950s by the American military industry which incorrectly believes that radiation can not cause the harmful effects in the form of cancer, DNA damage, neurological diseases, mental illness and heart problems etc. although this is increasingly proven from the research.

This sharp increase in radiation is probably an effect of 5G being expanded and starting to transmit in combination with 4G+. Only a year ago, 100,000 microW / m² was considered to be unusually high radiation. Now suddenly 10 times higher levels are measured in many places.

There is very little research on the effects of 4G and virtually none on the effects of 5G. There is absolutely no research on simultaneous exposure to 4G and 5G, nor on simultaneous exposure to 3G and 4G. There is no research at all that shows that these signals at these radiation levels that are now being measured are not dangerous to human health and the environment. On the contrary, previous research shows that much lower levels, starting at around 100 microW / m², increase the risk of ill-health symptoms and also of cancer with long-term exposure.

This means that the telecommunications companies, with the support of Swedish authorities, are currently conducting a gigantic dangerous experiment with the entire Swedish people. And it is we who have to control the consequences because the authorities have released all environmental monitoring and control of the effects that the radiation leads to.
